

Open rebellion

Henry III is about to confront rebellion in England led by his brother-in-law the Duke de Montfort supported by his Gascony barons.

Conrad fights hard to defeat Clugney and his French allies.

Margaret works hard to keep Roland out of it.

Roland currently just fortifies Hexham and waits.

*Brother is pitted against his kin
And Teutons travel from frozen lands
Families are driven from their homes
By peasants ranged in raiding bands*

Events

Fleeing farmers are attacked by pursuing bandits.

The Crow Folk attack the Set.

New knights harass the villagers of Billige

Corpses of recognised people (Drumclog Few, Billige residents, Knavesmire refugees) are found by the roadside.

Roaming bands from the peasants army are spotted.

Hexham is besieged.

Carrier pigeons can be shot down to find messages from Margaret to Clugney. She plans to sabotage Hexham's defences

Something new

The peasants revolt!

From the North, marching through Little Wenham, a peasant army approaches intent on heading south and confronting the King in London.

Conrad's forces are split as he tries to halt them.

Locals

The Crow Folk prey on locals, already in turmoil. They even attack as far as Billige.

Bandits following in the wake of the peasants start to harass people in the northern farms. Northern farmer families start appearing as refugees. Their livestock and crops taken and slaughtered by the foraging peasant army.

Two farming families

Thomas Mossman and his family. Elsbeth his wife, Peter, Paul and Mary, his young children. Robin the dog

Richard Tiller and his family Mary his wife, Geoffrey, Georgie and Georgia his young children. Ellen the chicken.

Leopold evacuates his tavern as bandits sack it. Knavesmire is now only a memory of a village. They arrive at the Set in Emlyn's cart. Philip is with them so soon the Crow Folk will know its location.
